

parent group leader in contrast to what I knew of the children of rebellion that formed this group, as well as what I did not know about the man who was leading them. Then God spoke to me on the issue....

The LORD said, "Do you have good reason to be angry?"
Jonah 4:4 (NASB)

It was on my heart that the name of my LORD was disgraced and there were other issues left dangling. I thought I did have the right to be angry, so long as it did not cause me to sin. Then God spoke to me through Jonah 4:11, paraphrased....

Why should I (God) not show compassion and mercy to people who are like children?

I thought....these people denied You in Your Sanctuary and You are asking me to not be angry? LORD, You must be kidding. Then God reminded me about forgiveness in the middle of my conflicted and tormented mind, and I gave my anger over to Him. I forgave all parties involved in the mutiny and left the issue in the hands of my LORD without passion or prejudice. I have no prophetic word from the LORD concerning the ministry that currently resides in the place of the former NFF, but I do have my personal opinion based upon existing patterns of people in this region and worship styles. The rest is up to God. I can only hope that the blood, sweat and tears that we shed in that place were not for no reason in terms of the vision that God showed me during my pastorate at the NFF. I can find contentment in the knowledge that the vision faded away from my sight because my time and mission there was completed. I held this ground until I was relieved and my faith remains 'Unshakable'.
